“They are out of sync”

The CSCMP 2022 State of Logistics Report was updated Tuesday, Sept. 20, 2022. The bottom line shows “They are out of sync.”

The report is a rigorous compilation of leading logistics intelligence from around the world and shines a spotlight on industry trends and key insights on ever evolving supply chains across a number of sectors.

All in all, the panelists were optimistic about the future, while noting many daunting challenges.

Under pandemic

As COVID-19 showed that turmoil in logistics is the new rule of the game. But if getting back in sync still seemed out of reach as this current report went to print, shippers were already acting to build new resilience and agility in the face of a “no normal” context.

Seeking sync: new game, new rules

One way this has manifested is through merger and acquisition (M&A) activity—historically a popular way for railroads, trucking companies, and other logistics players to beef up capacity. But many have sought to address the current challenges at a deeper, more intrinsic level—by evolving their delivery offerings and seeking to bring greater efficiency to capabilities.
